Wella Professional's Allergy Alert Test (AAT) Policy

STEP 1

Familiarise yourself with your insurance policy in regards to Allergy Alert Testing.

STEP 2

Take your client through the AA Questionnaire as part of their colour consultation (before every colour service).

STEP 3

Follow the outcomes as directed on the AA Questionnaire.

FAQ's

- Has Wella's AAT policy changed since Covid?

No, our AAT guidance remains the same as before.

- What if my client has had, or thinks they may have had, Covid?

Based on what is known today, no correlation between Covid-19, hair colouring, and allergic reactions can be concluded. Simply follow the Wella AAT policy by conducting the AA Questionnaire before a service as usual. If your client is concerned, we would always recommend doing an Allergy Alert Test before their colour service.

- What if my client has used a 'box' colour at home since her last visit?

You need to conduct an AA Test on your client if they have used a different colour product, such as a home-colour product, since their last visit to you.

- My client only has bleach, not colour. Do I still need to AAT?

No, you don't need to do an AAT for Blondor or Magma, although you should do elasticity and hair sensitivity tests. However, if you plan to use a toner (or even if you think you might need to) you need to follow the usual AAT steps for the toner shade.

- What about the new patch testing kits?

So far we have not seen the scientific evidence underlying the value of these test kits for hair colour consumers and cannot recommend it to be used for our hair colour products. Patch testing kits do not meet the industry criteria set for the Allergy Alert Test.

- My client has had a reaction to the hair colour I used in the AAT / to the colour service. What do I do next?

Advise the client to consult their doctor and update their salon record card with full details of the reaction. Report the reaction to our Wella Advisory department (0845 704 5775 infowellauk@coty.com)

- Where can I obtain more detailed information about allergies and your colour products?

Our Hair Colour Facts Leaflet is available on education.wella.com, and from your Account Manager.
